

LIFE ON THE OCEAN WAVE.
"A life on the ocean wave,
The man who wrote it was green;
He never had been to sea,
And a storm he had never seen.
He had never been aroused
From the morning's gentle daze
By the sound of rushing water
As it rolled over the broad boat;
He had never heard a man
Screaming right over his head
With a voice sufficient to move
From their graves the slumbering dead.
He had never seen a fat woman
Grown thinner every day,
And living over the broad side,
And more than half dead.
Whale-sperm oil carcasses,
"Good in taste the woman may be,
And amazingly oily it is nothing at all
But the rolling of the sea.
And, oh! he has never been sick,
And crept into bed with his coat,
While every motion increased his pain,
And his feelings all in his throat."

The New Horse Disease.

We need not tell our readers what we mean by the above line, for the papers have of late been full to overflowing with startling accounts of the horse disease, so called, and its terrible doings in the Eastern cities.

It seems that this strange disease first appeared in Canada, and from thence worked down into the New England States, and from thence westward and southward. What it is we do not pretend to say, nor do we think there is anything reliable in the almost countless theories touching its origin. Canada has some of the best veterinary surgeons in the world, and they attempt no hypothesis other than the vague statement that it is the result of some inexplicable atmospheric influence. Under these circumstances, all we can do is to give the symptoms and the remedies most popular up to this writing.

The first noticeable symptom indicating an attack of this terrible malady, will be a flow of tears from the eyes of the horse, a watery discharge from the nose and general languor. Next a cough, which becoming more frequent, will soon occur in paroxysms. In the commencement the membranes of the nose will be found paler, or of a leaden color, and those of the eyes presenting a yellowish or reddened appearance. Many cases are ushered on with a chill. All this is soon succeeded by a general feverish condition, manifested by heat of mouth, membranes of the eyes and nose reddened, pulse frequent, though soft and easily compressed, respiration quickened and sometimes laborious.

At this stage the bowels may be sluggish, urinary organs inactive, and the discharge from the nose often assuming a yellowish or greenish appearance. The disease usually runs its course within ten days.

Of course there are many remedies offered for this disease. We have before us a circular issued by Dr. Elliott, of Canada, which advises, as a preventive, that stables be well ventilated, the horses warmly blanketed, and chloride of lime sprinkled through the stables every morning. As a treatment, he says the nostrils should be sponge out two or three times a day, if the mucus adheres thereto. The food should consist of bran with a little oats, and a moderate quantity of hay. If the bowels are constipated a half pint of raw linseed oil may be given; but it is probable that the mastic will cause sufficient relaxation.

Prescription No. 2 (given below) should be administered every morning and evening. If the throat should be sore—which can be ascertained by the pressure of the hand upon the larynx—about two table-spoonfuls of prescription No. 1 (also given below) should be rubbed in. So long as the disease is confined to the larynx there is very little danger, but should it descend to the lungs—which will be indicated by continued standing up of the animal, cold extremities and labored breathing—a half-pound of mustard should be mixed with two ounces of turpentine and water to the consistency of thick cream, and the mixture rubbed well in behind the ears over the region of the lungs. The legs should be bandaged, if cold, the pulse should be over fifty-five per minute, fifteen drops of Fleming's tincture of camphor should be given every two hours; and if the breathing still continues labored and the pulse grows more rapid, apply the mustard again, and give one and a half drachms of calomel for two mornings.

The following are the prescriptions referred to:

Prescription No. 1.—Linseed oil, 1 1/2 oz.; turpentine, 1 1/2 oz.; liquor ammonia forte, 1 oz. Mix all together in a four-ounce bottle and apply to the throat if you think necessary to do so.

Prescription No. 2.—Nitrate potash, 1 1/2 oz.; tartrized antimony, 1 1/2 oz.; digitalis, 1 oz. Pulverize all together and make twelve powders, give one morning and night. P. S.—If they are not very bad, you might omit the last ingredient, namely "digitalis."

Dr. Elliott's treatment has been the most successful of any other, and therefore we need not trouble the reader with anything further on the subject.

The Asiatic cholera is steadily advancing on its westward march, through Hungary, Prague, and Vienna, it has led its desolating course, and from Germany to France, Spain, Portugal, the Netherlands, Great Britain, and thence across the sea by ship to our own shore, its progress seems inevitable, unless, indeed, it is checked by the frosts of winter.

After the infliction of four years more of the plague of Granitum, we have grown a little callous about any other plagues, but nevertheless it would be well for our cities to adopt exceptionally stringent hygienic plans for next spring and summer. If the cholera comes among us next year, we trust it will be more effectually met than has been Granitum.

From the Washington Chronicle's report of the Jenkins hanging: "The curiosity extended beyond the male sex, as from the surrounding houses many females peered upon the scene through opera-glasses. The morbid curiosity exhibited by the spectators was seen both within and without the prison walls. No person was allowed to have commanding view. Finally, the police took possession and prohibited any from ascending."

Tragedy in Lexington.

From the Sedalia Democrat, 14th: News reached this city last evening that another murder had been committed in Lexington, Lafayette county.

The victim is J. W. Groves, Esq., the late accomplished editor of the INTELLIGENCER, and the murderer is Ed. Turner, one of the editors of the Register. There had been some trouble between them, and during the late campaign Turner published an article in his paper, reflecting on Groves' character, charging him among other things with having deserted from the rebel army. They met during yesterday, and Groves denounced Turner as a lying son of a b—h. Neither did more than abuse language, but they met again about five o'clock in the evening and after a few words Turner drew his revolver and deliberately shot Groves in the breast, killing him instantly.
